Title: Adoption of Innovative Teaching Learning Methodologies.

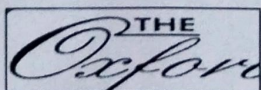

The Oxford College of Pharmacy as an endeavour to promote and enhance learner centric environment strives to incorporate various innovative teaching methodologies and ICT enabled teaching practices and resources into curriculum delivery practices, so as to cater to the diverse needs of the students enabling to enhance the skill quotient as well as making students globally competent.

To achieve the same, The Oxford College of Pharmacy has framed an array of teaching learning initiatives such as Problem based learning, Journal Club, Case studies, Group discussion, e-content, MOOCs, Swayam, Instrument handling, Demonstrations etc, whereas the concerned faculty have been empowered and trained by IQAC so as to pick up any relevant identified initiatives as per the mode of teaching with prior approval from HOD, Dean academics and Principal. This initiative has helped in facilitating student learning experience thereby enhancing the academic performance of the students exponentially.

Further the institution has the practice of organizing Value -added courses to bridge the industry-academia interface to make students employable and industry ready. This practice has enabled students to excel in academic initiatives. Also, The Oxford College of Pharmacy with the aid of Research and Development Committee of the institution has further initiated measures to instil research culture among students, so as to nurture them by imbibing research initiatives in teaching learning methodologies. As a result of the said initiatives the institution has constantly achieved 100% pass percentage over a period of time and 34 students paper publications.
